GREAT NORTHERN HITS S. P. CHARGE

The Great Northern, which is linked with the Western Pacific's peninsular project, announced Tuesday that its passenger service into San Francisco would be delayed from May 1, the date set, because the Southern Pacific has not removed its "Shasta arbitrary."

This caused some harsh words to fly between the two railroads.

The "Shasta arbitrary" is an $18 charge made by the Southern Pacific between Portland and San Francisco for hauling passengers of other lines. The Southern Pacific replied that it will remove the charge, if the other roads will bear part of the expense.

Hearing on the "arbitrary" is before the state railroad commission, but Great Northern officials see no chance for a decision in time to share fully in the summer tourist traffic.

MRS. BOOTH DIES AT SAN MATEO

Mrs. Elberta N. Booth, 58, died in San Mateo Monday. She was the niece of Mrs. B. Kucserka of Menlo Park, and leaves four daughters in Portland, Ore. The body will be sent to Portland Wednesday by the James Crowe Co. of Redwood City.

BOND BROKER GETS LITTLE SYMPATHY FROM COURT

When the case of the People of the state against Black came before Judge Swart yesterday the matter of bail was argued. The court very plainly explained that he had little sympathy for bond brokers. ## CITY QUOTA FOR SCOUTS NEARING HALF-WAY POINT

Redwood City today had raised approximately 41 per cent of its $1500 quota in the annual Boy Scout finance campaign now in progress, it is reported by Chairman Edward T. Harrison.

Second to Hillsborough in the county percentage column, Redwood City has contributed $607.50 in cash and $16 in pledges, according to Harrison.

"The drive is progressing on schedule and the results are gratifying," he reports. "Redwood City, San Carlos, Woodside, Atherton and Menlo Park have been given the benefit of a full time resident scout executive, and to maintain this advantage it is imperative that each community raise its full quota."

$43,706 COUNTY'S SHARE OF MOTOR VEHICLE LICENSES

San Mateo county last Friday was awarded $43,706 as its share of $6,668,062 collected from motor vehicle registration fees during the year 1931.

The fees are divided by the state and counties and the money is used for highway maintenance purposes.

APPEAL FOR NEW TRIAL CONSIDERED

The observation that "juries are sometimes free with other people's money" was made in court today by Superior Judge Franklin Swart in taking under advisement the appeal of Tony Tenent, San Mateo taxi man, for a new trial of the $5000 damages awarded Gertrude Juckert for personal injuries incurred in an automobile accident.

Judge Swart indicated that it would be his policy not to interfere with the actions of the jury, but that he might modify or increase the damages which the bodies allow, depending upon the evidence.

Tests include a physical examination, written and oral examinations, and actual driving of the vehicle over a part of the route, Captain Logan announces.

Close to 55 drivers were examined in the county by Officers R A. Hewitt and Jack Quinlan, Logan reports.

Average daily attendance in Iowa public schools has increased 15 per cent in the last 10 years.

TWO HELD IN BURGLARY OF DRUG STORE

Print Of Pegleg On Cash Register And Floor Clue

Imprints of a pegleg on the cash register and floor of the Menlo Park drug store which was burglarized early Tuesday brought the arrest Wednesday of John Byrd, 24, a peddler, as a suspect. His companion, John Duncan, 32 a laborer, was also held in the county jail in Redwood City, and both face charges of burglary.

Deputy District Attorney Harold F. Anderson of District Attorney Edmund Scott's office announced that neither man had confessed being implicated in the burglary.

Deputy Sheriff John Simpkin of Sheriff James J. McGrath's office reported Wednesday that the print of a rubber "heel" on the cash register closely resembled that of Byrd's wooden leg. The deputy sheriff made photographs of the wooden leg prints and of the rubber base, and noticed that both had a shield design.

Byrd and Duncan were arrested in Palo Alto Tuesday afternoon at about 4:30 o'clock and were booked at the Redwood City jail by Chief Frank Love of Menlo Park and Deputy Sheriff Belton Rhodes. Search for a pegleg man was made by Chief Love after he had observed the prints of the pegleg on the floor of the Harms Drug Company, Menlo Park.

Elimar Harms, proprietor, identified Byrd as having been in the store the night before the burglary, Chief Love reported.

ATTORNEYS FACE CONTEMPT CHARGE

Two San Francisco attorneys were cited for contempt of court Tuesday morning by Superior Judge Franklin Swart for non-appearance when an automobile damage suit was called.

HIS BIG MISTAKE

BALTIMORE, Md. — Harry C. Liedlich will be more careful of the roads he picks from now on. He turned on to a railroad track, thinking it was an automobile highway. As he drove down the bumpy roadbed he saw a fast express rolling along toward him. He managed to leap out of his car before the train plowed into it, wrecking it completely.

PLANNERS ACT TO SEGREGATE TRAFFIC ON BAYSHORE ROAD

HISTORY MADE IN DECISION OF CO. GROUP

Proceedings Under Police Power For Setback Legal

Steps toward carrying out the plan of making the Bayshore highway a trunk artery with segregated local and through traffic were taken Wednesday by the San Mateo County Planning Commission, which made planning history in proceeding under police power to establish set-back lines instead of filing th usual condemnation proceedings.

This is the first time this practice is being applied in the West. Hugh Pomeroy, adviser to the planning commission, reported. and is based on a ruling by District Attorney Edmund Scott that the procedure is legal.

The plan calls for 30-foot setback lines on the Bayshore highway, so that an 80-foot "through" highway can be built, as well as two 27-foot local streets on either side.

It was brought out during the planning commission's meeting this morning, that the state highways are being built principally for "through" traffic, and that any local lands opened up and benefited were obtaining a "gift" from the state. Because of this, the commission was to'd, local interests must help to preserve the "through" highway status of the state arteries.

The commission acted at once to secure the set-backs on the Bayshore highway in keeping with the trunk highway plans.

Two subdivision maps were approved, that of an addition to Belle Haven City and of a cabin site area for the Native Sons at Pescadero. David D. Bohannon developer of Belle Haven City thanked the commission for the suggestions received, and said that best interests of the public and the subdivisions would be served by consulting closely with the planners.

COUNTY REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE ADOPT PRIMARY PLANS

Strong resolutions endorsing the administration of Herbert Hoover and urging his re-election were adopted. Lauditory resolutions commending the good work of Senator Shortridge were also adopted. Resolutions lauding the splendid efforts of Congressman A. M. Free in bringing the air base to Sunnyvale were approved.

Judge Buck yesterday appointed H. C. Tuchsen inheritance tax appraiser of the estate of J. H. O'Keefe, deceased.

COUNTY WILL BUY MORE VOTE BOXES

San Mateo county today faces the necessitv of buying 420 extra ballot boxes to handle three special elections which will occur on May 3. The cost of these, according to County Clerk Elmore B Hinman, will be about $2.50 each or $1050.

With the purchase of the 420, San Mateo county will have 600 ballot boxes. The county now has 180, but will need 20 more for regular purposes this year on account of an increase of that many polls.

At that rate of increase, it will be 21 years before the county has grown enough to use the 600 ballot boxes in a regular election.

PROGRAMS ARE TO HONOR WASHINGTON

Programs in both the grade schools and high schools, and in the service clubs and other civic organizations during the coming week will probably mark the principaly observance of Washington's birthday locally.

A citizens' committee appointed recently by Mayor Daniel R. Stafford has considered plans for Redwood City's observance of the Washington centennial by a public ceremony and program on February 22, but it appeared that such a plan would not be consistent with other plans already made.

The citizens' committee hopes that the Washington centennial celebration can be held in connection with Fourth of July, or some other appropriate occasion during the year.

'NOT GUILTY' PLEA ENTERED BY NEGRO

A "not guilty" plea was entered yesterday before Superior Judge Franklin Swart by B. H. ("Buster") Haley, Palo Alto Negro accused of the murder of Mrs. Zettie Gaines of Dumbarton Oaks.

MAYOR ENDORSES BOY SCOUT FUND CAMPAIGN HERE

Mayor Daniel R. Stafford of Redwood City has joined the other mayors of San Mateo county in giving his endorsement to the Boy Scout campaign for funds which is now being conducted. He issued the following proclamation:

"We, as citizens of Redwood City, having the best interests of our community at heart, will be asked to help support financially, in the next few days, one of San Mateo county's most important organizations—the Boy Scouts.

"The Boy Scout organization is without question one of the finest manifestations of democracy in the nation. The funds raised are used in training and developing the citizens of tomorrow. It can safely be charged on your budget as an investment in future good citizenship

"I sincerely believe that there is no organization which gets more quickly to the growing youth of the land with the lessons in democratic intercourse with one's fellows from all grades of society; no organization which so finely supplements the home with lessons of good character, and manly integrity; no institution which helps so well to prepare boys for a wholesome life.

"Let every man and woman in Redwood City as well as the county have a share in this fund It means better, manlier, cleaner boys today, and better, more trustworthy citizens tomorrow.

"Surely an organization which does these things is entitled to our support."

(Signed) Daniel R. Stafford,
Mayor of Redwood City.

ELECTIONS WILL COST $125,000

REDWOOD CITY, Feb. 12.—San Mateo county and municipal residents must pay out close to $125,000 this year for elections, County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman estimated Wednesday.

Three county elections, the May presidential; August primary, and November general, will run $30,000 each, or $90,000, and the cities will use up the balance of the expense.

The county has 200 polling places with six officers to each poll, each employe collecting $10 or $60 to the poll. Ten dollars is also charged for rent, making a single polling place expense of $70, or $14,000 for the 200 polls.

Other major items include election supplies, printing, precinct notices, booths, tally, phones, electric lights, etc.

Haley's Trial Set Feb. 26

Judge Swart yesterday set the trial of Edward Haley, charged with the murder of Zettie Gains at Five Points, for Friday, February 26. When the court asked the accussed if he objected to Friday as the day of trial he frankly declared he was not superstitous and did not object to the day. Haley had previously pleaded not guilty to the charge. Albert Mansfield is defending the accused. The attorneys for both sides said the trial of the case would consume a day and a half.

Cannibalism, once common in several parts of the world, is now practiced in only a few sections. Cannibals are known to live in some parts of New Guinea, Africa, and the interior of Australia.

Merchants Busy Preparing For Community Sale Days

BRILLIANT yellow streamers, with huge black type announcing "COMMUNITY SALE DAYS" Friday and Saturday, February 19 and 20, will soon be on every merchant's window in preparation for the big event which is soon to be here.

Merchants are busy this week searching the markets for the best bargains possible to obtain, in order that Redwood City people may buy cheaper than at any time in the history of the city. Crowds are expected to attend from the entire county.

More stores are participating in this bargain event than in any other ever held, which points to the fact that every line of merchandise will be on sale during these two days.

Community Sale Days are being held instead of the semi-annual dollar days this year.

The value of the dollar today is $1.79, making it far above its average value and giving the public the lowest prices since 1913 However, business statistics point to a rapid rise in prices early in the spring, so merchants urge shoppers to buy heavily now and especially during Community Sale Days.

HOSPITAL BILL POLICY OF CO. BOARD RAPPED

Supervisor Thompson Says Colleagues Are Collection Agents

Despite the protest of Dr. C. V Thompson, Burlingame supervisor that the county board, in guaranteeing payment of bills for highway crash victims was in effect acting as a collection agency, the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors Monday afternoon refused to set a definite policy as to future claims.

It paid the $189 bill presented by the South San Francisco Hospital for ambulance service and hospitalization given highway victims during December, 1931, which the board had previously held up for perusal.

Hickey Approves Claim

"There is nothing wrong with the bill," Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey said in moving to pay the claim. Supervisor John W. Poole, Redwood City, agreed, and seconded the motion.

Dr. Thompson, who previously had stated that the complaint had come from physicians that the county board was discriminating against the majority of doctors in favor of a few, said that the board was in effect subsidizing these private institutions by assuring them that the county would pay the bill if the patient could not.

He favored the board's first aim of providing ambulance service, first aid and 24-hour hospitalization, which is to be paid for by the patient if able, and by the county, if not. After the 24 hours, the patient would be placed in the Community Hospital which the county is maintaining at great expense.

Bills Mounting

The supervisor-doctor reminded his colleagues that the board had heard nothing of the matter until some hospitals came in to say that their ambulances were being called out frequently and that they were not getting reimbursed for the services, and that the county ought to establish an emergency hospital at Mills Field or some other central point. Now, he said, not only ambulance bills, but claims for medical care and hospitalization are being presented.

After considerable discussion, the board decided to wait for another month to see how large the expense would be under the present arrangement.

F. M. CRAIG DIES AT SALT LAKE

Frank Moore Craig, 47, peninsula and San Francisco sportsman, died Wednesday in Salt Lake City of complications following an operation for appendicitis. His wife, Mrs. Bessie Craig, was with him.

More than 150 breakfasts, lunches and dinners are served to various members of the royal retinue of Buckingham Palace, London, every day

CROSS-COUNTY ROAD REVIVED ON COASTSIDE

Original Committee Is Enlarged; State Aid Sought

New impetus to the San Joaquin-to-the-Sea highway project from San Mateo to Half Moon Bay was gained Tuesday when the original committee of five members was enlarged to include the whole board of supervisors, following a dinner meeting of the Half Moon Bay Chamber of Commerce.

Manuel Francis, supervisor from Half Moon Bay, became chairman of the new committee by virtue of his office as chairman of the board of supervisors, replacing Dr. C. V. Thompson, chairman of the original committee. Besides the five supervisors, Judge John J. McGrath, San Mateo; Mayor C. A. Buck, Burlingame, and Mayor Aylett Cotton of San Mateo, will be among the committeemen.

It was decided to enlarge the committee of 10, if it is deemed necessary, to win county-wide representation on the highway project, similar to the step taken in the Redwood Harbor matter.

The committee's aim will be to secure state financing of the highway by getting it into the secondary program of the state, through efforts to be made by the California State Chamber of Commerce.

The San Mateo county supervisors, it was brought out, already have petitioned the state engineering department to make a survey of the most feasible route to the coast.

Hugh Pomeroy, adviser to the planning commission, and James S. James, county surveyor, were asked to have the planning commission make a study of coastside beaches and facilities, after the former had given a talk on the necessity of this step to preserve the ocean front for parks and recreational uses.

Other speakers at the dinner were James, who talked on the need of a unified road organization; Frank McVeigh, on the charter movement; Fred Drake and Judge McGrath, on the highway project, and Supervisor T. L. Hickey on state co-operation on local highway financing.

HOWARDS LOSING FIGHT ON BANK

Superior Judge George H. Buck Wednesday refused to grant a continuance asked by the Bank of America of litigation designed to remove the bank as guardian of the estate of Robert S. Howard, Menlo Park student, and ordered the case to trial.

Shortly afterward, Judge Buck stated that it was useless for him to remove the bank, as Mrs. Fannie Howard had full power to restore the institution five minutes later. He then continued the matter till Thursday.

John Mannon, of counsel for Charles S. Howard and his two sons, Lindsay and Charles, argued for immediate removal of the institution, saying it could not act as both guardian and trustee of the boy's estate.

Some $2,500,000 is involved, being a trust fund created by Charles and Fannie Howard in 1930. Judge Buck observed during the hearing that he would not have disposed of United States bonds in favor of municipal bonds, as the guardian had done.

DERRUAU WILL CONTEST LOOMS

Mrs. Marie Derruau, widow of the late Elie Derruau, who died in this county January 6, leaving an $8000 estate, yesterday filed a contest to probate of his will.

Two grandsons were left the estate, Derruau cutting off his son.

Administrator Files Petition

Dr. J. C. McGovern, public administrator, yesterday had on file in Redwood City a petition for letters of administration in the estate of Adolph Fiebig, who died February 7, 1932. The estate will not exceed $10,000.

JUDGES SOMETIMES TOO CRITICAL

One cannot blame the petitioners if they regard as judicial tyranny the refusal of a New York judge to permit the incorporation of their organization under the name "The Jiggs Nut Club, Inc."

The learned court held that "Jiggs" did not "appeal to the spirit of good taste" and that "nut" contains "a dangerous suggestion of mental disturbance." The petition was denied "on the ground that the name is not an appropriate or dignified name."

On the matter of dignity the court may have been right. But as to the appropriateness of the name the petitioners should be best authority. A long range view is that the club members had a fairly accurate estimate of their own dignity and mental status and were quite eager to advertise them.

The judge was unnecessarily paternal, to say the least.—San Francisco Chronicle.

DRUNKEN LUCK

LOS ANGELES — Thomas F. De Muth has plenty of that drunken driver's luck. He drove in front of a Pacific Electric train and it dragged his car for more than 200 feet before it could stop. With horror the engineer viewed the wreckage, only to sigh with relief shortly after as he saw De Muth emerge unharmed. The driver was placed in jail on intoxication charges.

The American fishing industry is valued at more than half a billion dollars. It employs 126,000 persons.

Menlo Park

Peter J. Detels passed away in San Francisco on February 9 after a long illness. The deceased was a nephew of James D. O'Kane of Menlo Park and a son of the late Margaret Detels, nee O'Kane. Detels was a foster brother of Lillie Kuck, whose father at one time owned the Pacific Gardens at Five Points, Redwood City. Detels was raised by the Kucks. He was a native of San Francisco, aged 38. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at San Francisco.

Mrs. Winifred Brown, wife of George Brown, has announced her candidacy for city clerk. Mrs. Brown is a capable young woman fully qualified to successfully fill the place. She has many friends who are preparing a spirited campaign on her behalf.

With elaborate ceremony the Menlo Park Post of the American Legion and the Woman's Auxiliary were installed in Masonic Hall Wednesday evening before a large throng. Members from Legion posts in the bay region were present to see their comrades ushered into the American Legion, whose membership in the United States now numbers one million.

A parade through town, headed by the Redwood City Drum Corps, aroused much enthusiasm so that when the commodious hall was reached a high spirit of good will prevailed. Every movement of the Legion in its impressive ceremony was applauded.

The San Mateo degree team put on the work for the Legion in a manner that was highly commended. T. Louis Chess of San Mateo and division commander of the Eighth District was in charge of the proceedings. He introduced Mayor W. H. Weeden, who in a neat speech congratulated the new organization on behalf of the citizens of Menlo Park and spoke with feeling of the good work of the Legion. Milton Shapiro, the attorney, chairman of the state promotion committee of the American Legion delivered a splendid address telling of the aims and objects of the Legion and bespeaking success for the baby post. Others also made addresses extending congratulations to the post.

The Mission degree team of San Francisco, headed by Mrs. G. Anderson, installed the members of the Auxiliary consisting of 70 members, the youngest of which is Emma Roberta Linquist, aged 2, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lindquist and granddaughter of Mayor Weeden. The officers of the Auxiliary are, Mrs. D. S. Devol, president; Mrs. Ruth Dyer, first vice president; Catherine Derry, second vice president; V. M. Walrath, chaplain; Mrs. Carl Lindquist, secretary-treasurer.

The cermony being over, refreshments were served by the pretty Auxiliary members. Then followed a dance that was enjoyed by everyone.

The new organizations have leased the Kuck hall in the Menlo Park Hotel that is to be fitted as a lodge hall and a lounging room for the members. The local post has the support of the citizens of the community who appreciate the great service rendered the country in its time of need.

All the churches in town are observing the holy season of Lent by special services. In the Catholic church services are held every Wednesday and Friday evenings at 7:45 o'clock.

Sally Paramo, aged 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lutz Paramo, passed away Monday ,February 8, at the home of her parents. The funeral was held from the Church of the Nativity yesterday morning. The little girl was well liked by everyone in Menlo.

Richard Cornelison, the good looking brother of Elmo Cornelison, deputy postmaster of Menlo Park, was united in marriage in San Francisco last Saturday to Miss Inez Padgett of Dallas, Texas. The pretty bride was here on a visit to her aunt and uncle, Major and Mrs. Park, of the Pacific Coast Military Academy here when the romance began. It has since flowed and culminated in marriage. Mr. Cornelison wears several badges for his prowess in the marine corps of the United States when this country was involved in Nicaragua. For two years Cornelison was with the marine there, winning glory for his bravery in many battles. The young couple will reside in Menlo Park. The bride is unusually pretty and charming and during her residence in Menlo Park has made many friends.

The Bear Gulch Water Company is diverting a portion of its overflow from the lake to the wells on the large estates about Atherton. The water poured into them reaches the gravel stratas below and is carried along to other wells in the district. This should assure an abundance of water for all purposes this summer. Nearly all the lakes in the vicinity are overflowing.

Every Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock throughout the Lenten season a Lenten Conference will be conducted in the public chapel of Corpus Christi Monastery on Oak Grove avenue by Rev. Father Maloney of the Jesuit Retreat House at Los Altos. The public is invited. Rev. Maloney is an eloquent preacher. These conferences were held last year and proved very successful.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Atherton Eyre gave a dinner for 12 last Thursday night at their San Francisco home for Miss Barbara Donohoe, who has returned to Menlo Park after two years abroad.

Under the auspices of the American Legion, Menlo Park Post, a country store is to be operated in the New Menlo Theatre Tuesday evening, February 16, at the regular theatre hours. The store is to be in charge of Si Cady. Those winning prizes in the store will come to the platform for their merchandise. A ladies' wood sawing contest and a peanut rolling battle will take place during the show. No extra charge.

J. J. Harcom, the real estate operator, has rented offices in the Mason building. He looks for a brisk business this spring and summer and wants to be in a position to handle a portion of it.

Many from Menlo Park attended the funeral of Mrs. Thomas Finn last Monday in San Francisco. She was the wife of Thomas Finn, exsheriff of San Francisco for a number of years and the political leader of the Republican party. Mrs. Finn was a highly esteemed woman with an army of friends on the peninsula.

Bishop John J. Mitty of Salt Lake City, reecntly nominated coadjutor bishop of San Francisco, is well known here. Many years ago he was chaplain of a Dominican convent in New York. When a house was established in San Francisco several sisters of the eastern convent were transferred to the coast and later to Corpus Christi Monastery here. They were delighted to learn of Bishop Mitty's promotion. The new coadjutor will arrive in about two months to assist Archbishop Hanna in his arduous tasks.

The city council met in regular session last Tuesday evening. All members were present with the exception of Councilman Blake.

A communication was read from Byrl R. Salaman, attorney for F. J. Furnivall, saying that furniture damaged by workmen employed by the city in removing a tree that had fallen on the Furnivall property on Mills Avenue, had not been settled for. The council was notified that an inventory of the furniture would be taken on February 15 and requested that a representative be present to note the damages. It was intimated that a suit would be brought to recover on the loss. The letter was referred to City Attorney Whitworth for a report.

Commissioner Crane presented the report of Chief of Police Love for the month of January and December. It was as follows: Motor vehicle violations $72.50; other violations $234.60; licenses $293.54; dog licenses $104.50; December motor vehicle violations $31; other violations $43; total $779.14. Arrests 54.

Treasurer Ryan reported as follows, general fund $5,012.25; street fund $788.25; improvement fund, 1930-32, $191.52; improvement, 1930-33, $3,464.18.

The State Compensation Insurance notified the council that the policy on compensation, protecting the employes of the city, would expire on February 25. The notice was filed.

Victor Dupont, a local business man, presented a petition asking for a permit to conduct a miniature dog course on the Kuck property. The matter was referred to the city attorney.

In a written statement to the council the whole scheme was set forth as follows:

To have a miniature dog track using only local dogs; six dogs in a race and seven races a night. The races will be held three nights a week.

This will require 20 men, all unemployed, and paid off in money which can be spent only in Menlo Park. This can be cashed only by Menlo Park business people. All scrip put out will be in fifty cent and twenty-five cent denominations.

The option tickets on dogs will be $1.00 for the first option ticket and fifty cents for second options; the winner is paid off in Menlo scrip, or money which can be spent in Menlo Park. Cash only is accepted for option tickets on dogs; that eliminates gambling, for the winner cannot play back scrip on dogs, but will have money that is as good as cash in any store in Menlo Park.

Twenty-five per cent is taken out from options bought for expenses, which is paid out to employes. This is also paid out in Menlo Park scrip, therefore every dollar taken in on options is put out in scrip which can be spent only in Menlo Park.

The out-of-town people may buy their merchandise on the grounds. This merchandise is purchased from Menlo Park merchants at retail prices.

There will be a sign displayed in commissary grounds that will read: "Any one can make out an order for merchandise by putting scrip in envelop which is furnished, and which will be turned over to a Menlo merchant and delivered without extra charge." Their attention will be called to this after each race.

The last will and testament of the late George Stafford was admitted to probate in the superior court yesterday. Mrs. Stafford was appointed executrix to serve without bonds.

Mrs. Stafford was granted a family allowance of $500 a month at her request.

The value of the estate is not known but it is believed that it will be in excess of $50,000. The interest of the deceased in the Stafford block on Broadway is the largest portion of the estate. The attractive home in Redwood Highlands and the grocery business are other items of value owned by the estate.

Ross and Ross are the attorneys for the executrix.

Traffic Accident Leads To Lawsuit

An automobile accident on the state highway near the Alta Mesa Cemetery road, south of Mayfield, resulted Tuesday in the filing of a $25,930 damage suit by W. B. Covert against F. E. Pond.

Cars driven by the two men collided at that point on November 2, 1931. Covert incurred a crushed chest and other injuries.

Labarthe Estate Petition Filed

Mrs. Anna Collins, 250 Edgewood road, Redwood City, wife of Police Chief C. L. Collins, yesterday filed a petition with County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman for probate of the will f her mother, Mrs. Marie Labarthe, who died January 21, here.

The estate will not exceed $10,000, it is stated, and will be equally divided between four children.

Letters Sought In Benedetti Est.

Mrs. Louise Cocco of Menlo Park has on file with County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman a petition for letters of administration in the estate of her brother, William S. Benedetti, who died December 26, 1931.

Another sister, Mrs. Marjorie O'Keefe of Palo Alto, is named as an heir to the estate.

Pastor In Talk To R. C. Kiwanis Club

"The prophets are those persons who are in a position to encourage the disheartened among the people," said the Rev. Paul L. Offenhiser, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Palo Alto, speaking before the Kiwanis Club Wednesday noon on the subject, "Where Are the Prophets?"

Charles Lambert offered the felicitations of the club, together with a gift, to Dr. N. C. Cummings upon the occasion of his birthday. James Hedge, secretary, reported on the dinner meeting of the first division session this year in Berkeley Tuesday evening which was attended by the president, John Gill; W. O. Tyson, B. E. Myers, and Mr. Hedge. At that time, Mr. Gill spoke on the activities of the local club for the past year.

Herman J. Phillips, recently elected district trustee, presided as chairman of the luncheon.

BENEFITS AND ILLS OF COUNTY MERGER AIRED BY LAWYERS

Two widely divergent pictures of the future San Mateo county, the one under consolidation to San Francisco and the other under its own rule, were painted last Friday in the Ravenwood school auditorium, East Palo Alto, by two prominent peninsula lawyers and residents.

Edward F. Treadwell, first mayor of Burlingame, a well-known San Francisco attorney, and a resident of Hillsborough, speaking for consolidation, said that San Francisco and San Mateo counties' problems are mutual, and best could be solved by a united government.

J. W. Coleberd, city attorney of South San Francisco, speaking against that view, said the problems were in common but that their treatment must be considered differently as San Francisco was concentrated and densely populated, whereas San Mateo county was scattered over a wide area and had patches of both sparse and dense population.

S. F. "Cleaned House"

Treadwell opened his remarks with the statement that he was not "seeking converts to a cause." Every point in the consolidation proposal so far set out has been formulated by the people of San Mateo county in co-operation with San Francisco, but the governing body of that city has not yet had a voice in the matter, he said.

The committee—the San Francisco-San Mateo County Consolidation Committee—first told San Francisco to "get its house in order," he said. This San Francisco did, Treadwell declared, in adopting the new charter and putting in force its provisions.

Treadwell said that of the 16 supervisors which the consolidated county would have, five would represent San Mateo county. With but one-tenth the population, this would give the peninsula one-third representation, he said. San Mateo county would have three members on the board of education, he said, in declaring that the San Francisco school system was one modern thing which the metropolis had before the 30-year old charter was revised.

Superior courts in San Mateo county would probably be the same, he said, but justice courts would probably be done away with in favor of municipal courts, and better trained men would be sought after, he said. All other offices would remain the same, he said, but would become "branch offices" of the super-government.

Boroughs Unnecessary

Treadwell is of the impression that the plan to make each peninsula city a "borough" of San Francisco is unnecessary, as, he said, the central government could take care of the problems of the other sections of the city and county as it is doing now in the Sunset, Potrero, Mission and Richmond districts in San Francisco.

San Francisco, he said, would assume 95 per cent of the outstanding $5,000,000 indebtedness of San Mateo county; in exchange. San Francisco will expect San Mateo county to assume 5 per cent of the cost of the Hetch Hetchy project, Treadwell said. This 5 per cent, however, he said will not be as great as the county's present $5,000,000 debt.

Taxes, according to a recent report by the state legislature tax committee, Treadwell said, are based on 37 per cent of actual value in San Mateo county, and 44 per cent in San Francisco. This means the tax on real estate in San Mateo county is $2.17 per $100, and only $1.77 in San Francisco, he said. The comparative tax rates are $4.04 in San Francisco, and an average city-county rate in San Mateo county of $7.

San Mateo county, as the second fastest growing county in the United States, according to the last census figures, must prepare for a growth which may be first in the next decade, Treadwell said

C.tes L. A. Mergers

In order that it may be ready for that growth, it must now solve its problems of water, highways, schools, transportation, sewers and government, and these can best be solved, he said, by a super-government of the two areas.

In summing up his remarks Treadwell said: "Visit any community in the Los Angeles area which has been annexed to Los Angeles and ask the people whether they would like to go back to the old order. They would look at you queerly; you'd be like a person asking them to ride a bicycle in these days of high-powered motor cars."

Dislikes "Foreignness"

Coleberd laid much emphasis on the "foreignness" of San Francisco, a city which he described as "densely populated, self-centered and concerned with its own governmental problems." In contrast to that, San Mateo county is, he said, a larger area (10 times) and has both sparsely and densely settled districts.

"Home rule" is a fundamental principle of the American government, he said, and it will not be had by setting up a super-government in the San Francisco city hall, "where the small voice of San Mateo county will seldom be heard."

"Those you now elect owe you an obligation," Coleberd said. "But those 'on the hill' in San Francisco to whom you would represent but one-seventh the population would not give much heed to your voice. You would, of course, get proper courtesy and an abundance of promises," he said

Sees Double Taxes

Coleberd took exception to the figures quoted by Treadwell as to the ratio of valuation taken for taxation purposes in San Mateo and San Francisco counties. He said the figure was between 50 and 60 per cent for San Francisco and quoted from the consolidation survey that "it was about 50 per cent." In San Mateo he said, it was but 30 per cent

This would mean, said Coleberd, that if the San Francisco ratio of valuation were applied to San Mateo county, as it would be under the order of the San Francisco assessor, that the peninsula "tax rate would double and then some."

Answering the Los Angeles satisfaction with annexation, Coleberd said that consolidation will probably come to the peninsula when the area is solidly built up and it is hard to distinguish where San Francisco stops and San Mateo county begins. He cited Hyde Park, Chicago, saying when it was annexed "it was ready to go in."

S. F. Must Supply Water

The water problem, Coleberd said, is cited as one of the strong arguments for annexation. But, he said, San Francisco will of economic necessity be forced to dispose of its surplus to San Mateo county because the people of that city would not stand for anything less, and (2) San Francisco probably will be compelled by the rail road commission to supply the water and at rates which will be reasonable and just.

Coleberd, pleading for a right of the people of the peninsula to vote on the charter movement said that the annexationists are rushing a vote for this spring on a program which they admit is as yet incomplete.

He summed up his remarks with the statement that every problem of San Mateo county could be solved without consolidation, and that every betterment suggested could be achieved just as well without merging the governments.

An open forum on the question was held at the conclusion of the debate. C. H. Steere of North Palo Alto presided at the meeting. It was announced that the East Palo Alto Chamber of Commerce had gone on record against the annexation and that it would keep the people of the area informed as to the progress of the movement.

UP AND DOWN THE STATE

A REFUGE FOR BEARS

Zoologists the country over, it is said, are preparing actively to support a bill in congress for setting aside Admiralty and Chichagof Islands, off Juneau, Alaska, as a refuge for grizzly and brown bears, said to be rapidly disappearing from most parts of the mainland, and from Kodiak Island, which has given its name to the brown species of this interesting family. The mere statement that there is no present reason for ousting grizzly and Kodiak bears entirely from the earth's surface seems a sufficient argument for the bill. It appears to be conceded that the bears will disappear from the mainland in the course of a few years, due to withdrawal of the protection that was extended to them for a long period.

Neither Admiralty nor Chichagof Island is at present well fitted for human occupancy, nor likely to be needed for that purpose for a long time to come. The former has some timber adapted to wood-pulp use, but there is not such a shortage of wood pulp at present as to indicate that a bear crop would not be more valuable. While the evidence offered by some enthusiastic naturalists is not wholly convincing that the reputation for ferocity of these two species is entirely unearned—they assert, for example, that neither variety ever makes an unprovoked attack upon a human being, based upon several hundred encounters with bears that were quite good-natured—it seems plain that such attacks seldom occur and that in the main these enormous mammals are quite inoffensive.

There may be, some time, some overwhelming reason for killing off all the grizzly and brown bears of Alaska, even in these two island refuges, but the extermination of the species can well be postponed until that reason appears. The adoption of the refuge bill by congress will assure the postponement. It might be found, for example, that when the bears are gone from the mainland, some animals which they now keep in check will increase to nuisance proportions and be even more difficult to deal with. In that case, the Alaskans might want the bears back and be glad of a supply of some thousands close at hand.—Los Angeles Times.

THE BRITISH PRISON RIOT

The riot at Dartmoor prison in England was something of a shock to American newspaper readers. Ordinarily when we think of crime or criminals in England it is to compare the British system of justice and our own with considerable disparagement to the latter. News of a prison riot over there promptly brought to mind the series of shocking prison riots which have taken place in this country in the past two years, usually with bloodshed and loss of life as well as property destruction. Such an affair in England seemed out of character.

Upon reading beyond the headlines, however, one learns that the Dartmoor prison riot was not much like ours, that the three hundred desperate convicts were subdued by fifty policemen, armed only with clubs. Incidentally there have been no escapes from Dartmoor prison since 1850. Either America has something to learn from the British about handling prisoners, or else British convicts have a lot to learn from America about staging riots.—Santa Rosa Press-Democrat.

A STATUTE AIMED AT THE RACKETEERS

The New York Legislature last year added to the list of public offenders the following:

"Any person engaged in some illegal occupation or who bears an evil reputation, and with an unlawful purpose consorts with thieves or criminals or frequents unlawful resorts."

The purpose of this is said to have been to make the way of the gangster and the racketeer harder, and according to police officials that object has been accomplished It is further explained that not arrests only were contemplated; that one purpose has been attained "by causing underworld characters to avoid New York."

In other words, the new section of the law is said to extend the application of the phrase "disorderly conduct," for which offense the maximum penalty in New York is imprisonment for six months. But as by its own terms the new provision of the law will expire on March 1, and so to some extent has been regarded merely as an experiment, the legislature is to be asked to make it permanent, which the press appears to regard as justifiable and desirable.—Sacramento Bee.

HOME DATES

Young people in Boston, reports a newspaper feature writer, have organized a "back-to-the-parlor" movement, which is nothing more nor less than having dates and good times in the home of the girl in the case instead of going to a show or a dance or a night club. Fudge and chocolate cake are said to be replacing synthetic gin as refreshments.

It may be an organized movement in Boston. In a good many other places it has come about naturally and unheralded, partly as a result of the depression and shortage of spending money in the pockets of young men, and partly as the next stage of the pendulum swing of social manners and customs. Even in the days immediately following the war, when youth was in its most flaming phase, there were philosophical elders who prophesied that the excesses and artificialities of that era would not last. They believed many fine things in the way of home life, simple pleasures, ingenuity and initiative and self-reliance in entertainment would come back after the jazz age had had time to wear itself out. Their faith appears now to have been justified.—Berkeley Gazette.

MEANING OF SINO-JAPANESE

Many people lately have seen the term "Sino-Japanese" in the day's news and some have wondered just what it meant. If you are one of those who have been wondering, that's a sign you didn't make the most of your Latin while in high school—or maybe you have forgotten most of it since leaving school. There really isn't much mystery about it.

"Sin" is the root syllable for the Latin word meaning China. The French get a little closer to it with their "Chine." Everyone is familiar with the French phrase, "crepe de Chine" or "cloth of China."

"Sino-Japanese" as a compound expression corresponds exactly with the more familiar "Anglo-American" in which English is Latinized for the sake of adjective combination. It is convenient and makes a better-sounding combination than "English-American." Another familiar example is "Indo-European," obviously a neater expression than "Indian-European."

Latin still is the "universal language" of culture. Its understanding still is of some use to the student, even though it is hard to convince a schoolboy that a language which has been "dead" for centuries is worth studying.—Santa Rosa Press-Democrat.

WHAT'S THE PURPOSE?

Surely the Japanese cannot express resentment when other nations ask them to define their program. Considering what has taken place, and what has been said in explanation of each step, the questions are appropriate. From the time when the world was informed there was no invasion of Manchuria but simply a police protection of the rail zone to the present when a peace plan is refused because it would mean loss of a seized Manchuria, there has been no frank revelation of the intent of the Japanese Government. At present it is declared Shanghai was bombed, Nanking attacked, and other places fired upon for the suppression of Chinese boycotts. In attempts to carry this out Tokio even asks other powers to help them force the Chinese out of their own city Events in the field have made the various explanations which have been made in reply to our notes appear ridiculously inadequate. —Oakland Tribune.

LAWYERS URGED TO CLEAN UP THE LAW

George W. Wickersham told the American Law Institute the other day that judges and lawyers are doing more than any other people to make reforms of our criminal procedure impossible. And he made this suggestive observation:

"State legislatures usually are dominated by lawyers, a large portion of whose practice consists in the defense of persons charged with crime."

Wickersham did not say, nor did he imply, that a majority of our lawyer-legislators deliberately prevent reform in order to further their private ends. He did not need to do so. Nor do the lawyers need to do deliberately what he nevertheless implied that they do.

You would not expect a legislature of physicians to enact a body of laws greatly restricting the activities and potential revenues of physicians. Neither can you expect a legislature of lawyers to legislate themselves out of a great deal of extremely profitable business. Men simply are not built that way.

Great Britain found this out a good many years ago, and turned the job of modernizing and simplifying her codes and procedure over to a body of laymen. They did a splendid job of it, too. One of these days, if our lawyers continue to default on what clearly is the task of our legislatures, we shall have to follow the British example —Sacramento Bee.

THEY REMEMBER JUST HALF

Some Mexican publicists are making faces at Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, Ohio, who was once secretary of war of the United States. Baker is on a private pleasure trip that has taken him to the City of Mexico. He started on the trip mainly to escape committing himself on his proposed candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president. Now, at the Mexican capital, he finds that he is being unpleasantly received.

There is, of course, no way in which the Mexican mind and the Yankee mind can meet on this matter.

For Baker was secretary of war at the time that Pershing was sent into Mexico in pursuit of Villa. That will always be, to the chauvinistic Mexican, an international and an unforgivable offense.

True, the Mexican government, then in a very inefficient state—an administration that was forcefully overturned by the present regime—had permitted Villa to offensively enter the United States and to shed blood of Americans at Columbus, New Mexico. Americans remember that, but Mexicans choose carefully to forget it. All they remember is that Pershing pursued Villa and crossed the border in doing so.—Fresno Republican.

WOULD HALT HOARDING

According to estimates, to which the president has called attention there are hidden in socks about one and one-third billions of dollars which could be at work for the betterment of conditions in this country. An ancient practice of hoarding has put a brake upon the recuperative powers of the nation.

How to stop hoarding is the problem. The president believes that an informed public opinion to reveal the loss to the individual and the country when money is tucked away without interest or activity will be of benefits. He has started a campaign of education and may call upon citizens and organizations throughout the country to aid in the work.

"Everyone hoarding currency injures not only his own prospects and those of his family, but is acting contrary to the common good," declares the president Appreciation of this truth would release, at a time when needed, a great deal over a billion dollars.—Oakland Tribune.

About 12,000 murders were committed in the United States during 1930. This is about 17 times the murder rate of England.

Bayshore 'Trunk Artery' Aims Being Preserved By Peninsula Planning Body

Overly pleasing is the progress which the San Mateo County Planning Commission is recording in the carrying out of its program of building for the future in the peninsula area. Only a few weeks ago the commission announced a plan of segregating traffic on the Bayshore highway by building a wide "through" highway and "local" arteries on either side. It struck some as a "dream project" of some future day.

But, already, the commission this week took the necessary steps looking toward regulation of the use of the land, so that the 30-foot setbacks desired can be put into effect under police powers. Thus the land will not be confiscated for highway purposes until needed, but the commission is empowered to regulate what use will be made of the land. It can thus prevent expensive heavy-type construction along the highway route, removal of which will later be achieved only at prohibitive cost.

Much of the land through which the Bayshore highway trespasses is still in its virgin state or early development. The state has, in the building of the highway, opened up thousands of acres of land which otherwise would have had little value. Because of this, the state has awarded generous "gifts" to the property owners, which, in turn, should win their co-operation in helping carry out the trunk highway idea.

San Mateo and Santa Clara counties are among the few in the state which have county planning commissions. They are to be congratulated on their foresightedness.

Law Is Intended for All Including Police, Judges

"People don't want the laws enforced."

That was the complaint of a peninsula police chief last week at the meeting of the Mayors' and Councilmen's Association of Northern California in Palo Alto. The same official strongly urged the various municipal representatives present to "back up your police departments."

The policeman's complaint was directed against the frequent dismissal by judges and juries of cases brought into court by police officers. He was only too correct in regard to the enforcement of traffic laws. In many cities and many courts "tag fixing" is a general and genially operated custom, and frequently it is only the ignorant, unfortunate and ill-acquainted who cannot "get to" somebody and have to pay the penalty.

So far so good, but the police official then went further in his complaints regarding the public's apathy to assert in effect, "I would break the law any time to enforce the law." This astounding statement was made following a eulogy of the Captain Jones of Los Angeles who was arrested for raiding "Lysistrata" a second time despite an injunction granted by the Los Angeles courts.

The officer's attitude of nobility towards "tag fixing" did not appear to extend as far as the "reverence for law" which he proclaimed. Police virtue may also become "easy", when there's a favor to be done for a "brother" department, it would also appear. For one of the mayors reminded the meeting that there are exchange agreements between police departments for the "fixing of traffic tags."

The people may not want the laws enforced, as the police officer declared, but the police themselves in some cities would not seem in many cases to be overly careful of the "police purity" so valiantly boasted by this particular official.

RIGHT OF ACCUSED TO CONFRONT WITNESSES

The sixth amendment to the federal constitution provides that an accused person shall enjoy the right to "a speedy and public trial," and "to be confronted with the witnesses against him." And it is said that all the states save Idaho have a like provision in their constitutions.

But Professor Stevens of the Cornell Law School says prosecutions frequently have failed because of the inability of the state to obtain the presence of important witnesses. New York and eight other states, however, in order to meet this condition, have provided for interstate exchange of witnesses in criminal prosecutions; but the New York law relates only to adjoining states.

A movement is now on foot to have a uniform law enacted in all the states, providing that a witness summoned from another state shall not be compelled to travel "more than 1000 miles by ordinary public conveyance." — Sacramento Bee.

CANARY-MOUSE TRAP

EVANSVILLE, Ind.—Mrs. Mary Kohl was setting a trap for a mouse when the telephone rang. She answered it and while talking, "Jimmy," her pet canary, who had the run of the house, approached the the trap to taste of the choice cheese with which it was baited. He pecked at it and the trap sprung, breaking his neck.

ENGLISH PALACE TO LET

LONDON (AP)—The crown lease on the royal palace at Richmond-on-the-Thames is on the market. The palace was first occupied by Henry I in 1125 and Queen Elizabeth died there in 1603. Some years ago the crown permitted a part of the building to become a private residence.

"Tucayan," he said; "Morales passed that way two days ago Such is the Spaniard's method; no man in his path is left alive."

"The last man in Tucayan died in my arms," I said, "and with his last breath he whispered, 'Viva Bolivar!'"

"Simon Bolivar has so great a hold upon his people . . . he will win, some day." His blue eyes went over me appraisingly. I think I read approval there. "Tall," he mused, "with shoulders and a light in the eye; knows the woods and the sea, I take it, and may have had a turn at soldiering. May I ask you who you are?"

"Assuredly; I am Loren Garde. My father is Norse, a planter of the lower Mississippi valley, and my mother in her youth was the belle of Vieux Carre."

He leaned the gun against his shoulder. "Norse and French . . such a combination ought to make you fight—and love—like the devil!"

"I fear I have had my share of fighting," I admitted, "but as for love—" I sighed because I visualized the glorious Lamartina.

"If you have come to Venezuela to fight, the ranks of Simon Bolivar are open to you, and I can promise you—"

"Francisco Perez intimated much the same thing."

There was studied calculation in his survey of me. "You know Francisco Perez?"

"I have come from New Orleans with him on the Santa Lucrecia."

He twisted a finger in his ear. "Balmy," he said, "a touch of the sun." He looked at me with professional sympathy. "Did you say the Santa Lucrecia?"

"Exactly; would I not know the name of the ship that brought me from New Orleans?"

"Oh, sure." He laughed. "Only, the Santa Lucrecia has not been sighted. When it is I shall hear a whistle from the east, and when I hear it I shall face west and whistle, and another man a kilometer from here will send the signal along. On the Puerto Cabello road other sentinels will signal to one another, and on the Valencia road, and the road to Barcelona, and roads to Calabozo and Ocumare. A man stationed upon the heights will sight it as it enters the harbor of La Guaira, which is the port of Caracas, and in five minutes every follower of Bolivar within fifty miles shall know it, and soldiers will spring up like spirits out of the earth, for the Santa Lucrecia brings a cargo of arms and knives and ammunition sufficient for an army. And then we will take—"

"If the men of Bolivar can whistle the Santa Lucrecia into the harbor of La Guaira, my freckled patriot, or into any other port except that dreadful port of missing men, they may take the prize as the champion whistlers of the ages, for, only two nights and a day ago the deck of that unfortunate ship was the scene of mutiny, and a tropical storm came up and washed the palm of victory upon a reef. As I fell into the water I saw them working with the lifeboats. A friendly spar, and the wind and waves, carried me on to the land."

He stood, long in thought. "Then Francisco and the cargo—"

He stopped, alert, for the road gave out the sounds of approaching horsemen. I pushed my way quickly through the hedge and crouched beside him as the cavalcade came into view.

Adolfo led the van. He rode in silence, his heavy features exhibiting lines of grimness. The Senorita rode beside him. A mule's lengths behind them rode Polito, a voluminous bandage around his head, eyes upraised to fleecy, westward-winging clouds, and upon his lips a softly whistled tune. There was something about the boy that made one love him. Two other women and two men—doubtless survivors of the wreck—trailed along, and a score of soldiers brought up the rear.

Now my eyes went back to the Senorita, who had come out of the storm and into my arms. I drank deeply of the beauty of her, I exulted in my dreams, and gasped at my recollections. A wild exhilaration seized me, and I came up slowly, to find myself shoulder to shoulder with the "Irishman from London," whose eyes were gleaming, whose breath was hissing through his teeth, and whose gun was rising carefully to bear upon De Fuentes. "No," I whispered, "no!" I grabbed him and, as we contended grimly and in silence for possession of the weapon, the cavalcade passed on. Then I loosed him and waited.

"What a powerful brute you are!" And then, "Dizzard," he gasped, "you poor doodle! That man is De Fuentes, aide of Morales, and a greater butcher by far than the infamous Butcher himself."

"You might have missed him," I said, "and killed the lady."

"Oh, the lady? Humph."

"Yes, the lady. Besides, Adolfo belongs to me."

He found his sombrero and pulled it down over tumbled red hair. "So Adolfo belongs to you . . . My eye!" he cried. "Yet De Fuentes went to Spain to get a bride—and I can say this much for him: He has surely picked the fairest flower in the Spanish garden!"

"It's a long way from Spain to the cathedral," I said.

He pulled at his pipe, his broad shoulders shaking with laughter. "I am Monahan," he said at length, "Captain in the British legion under Gen. Simon Bolivar. The Liberator will be deeply interested when I tell him about the American Senor Garde, who loves the intended of Colonel de Fuentes and who rides the wings of the storm alone when his ship comes to grief. Bolivar can use such men, my friend."

There was a frank friendliness about this transplanted patriot something that called for confidence, so I began with the Cabildo and completed my account with Tucayan, skipping only those portions which dealt with the Senorita Lamartina, and failing utterly in my deletions, for, when I had done, he said: "So the blond Loren will hie himself to Caracas, whither the dark beauty, his ladylove, is bound, and he will find there all the power of Spain in Venezuela against him."

"It is worth a try, at least," I said.

"Of course, but you go, not to a love tryst, but to fight a battle with death."

"I have fought such battles before, as you have also, no doubt; I have been too close to death in the past to fear it now."

He chuckled. "That yellow thatch of yours will sink you, for it cries your identity to all and sundry."

I touched my chin, which bore about a week's growth of corn-colored whisker. "I fear you are right; if you might suggest—?"

He picked up a stone and hurled it into the foliage of a near-by tree, and half a dozen objects resembling our huge green walnuts thudded to the ground. He crushed one under the heavy sole of a grenadier boot. "The juice of this pulp is an excellent dye," he explained; "it will make your hair and beard a very dark brown, and it will give to your too fair skin the deep bronze of a man who has spent his life with ships As the pigment will last some weeks, you need have no fear of it fading before the Spaniards are prepared to hang you."

So, using a broad flat rock as a mortar, we crushed from the thick pulpy covering of a number of the half-ripe nuts a quantity of pale liquid, which, on drying, left my skin a reddish brown and my hair and beard nearly black.

"You have funds?" he questioned.

"None; the leathern wallet containing a small quantity of money and a few papers of purely personal value was taken from the pocket of my jacket while I lay unconscious on board the Santa Lucrecia. The good Francisco probably did it."

"Then," said Monahan, laughing, "as a friend of Francisco I would proffer such financial aid as you may require."

He placed ten silver pieces the size of our American dollar into my hand. "This will buy you a hat and clothes that shall be less identifying, and pay for food and quarters in Carcas for at least a fortnight." He sighed. "I think your need of food and quarters will hardly last so long." Then abruptly: "I—I cannot dissuade you from this mad mission?"

I shook my head, and he went on: "If Caracas is your goal I might tell you that, in the humble home of Senor Tomas Carrasco, which lies less than two hundred meters south of San Jacinto plaza, you will find safe lodgment, and in the Cantina Merida, presided over by the faithful Carrizal, a few patriots sometimes gather. I am sure that when you have had further opportunity to study the methods of Spain in Venezuela you will come to us, though you will need a vast amount of luck to get into Caracas and safely out again."

"And these few patriots who sometimes gather in the menage of Carrizal—how shall I know them?"

He extended his right hand, third finger folded into the palm "That, in shaking hands, is the sign used by members of the Sociedad Patriotico, an organization founded by Simon Bolivar and Miranda nearly ten years ago."

He pressed my hand in a warm firm grip. "I think I shall not see you again. Too many forces are against you."

But he erred, for I was destined to fight, side by side, with Captain Monahan through a bitter campaign against the Spanish. I was yet to meet the moving spirits of that famous and miscalled British legion, which did so much to win from Ferdinand VII independence for Venezuela and half of South America as well; hardy souls, veterans, most of them, of the Napoleonic wars, who, after the fall of the Corsican, could not go back to the peaceful pursuits of man, but, chained to the chariot of Mars, must needs follow the lure of the sword.

CHAPTER IV
A WEDDING DISARRANGED

As I set out that morning on the road to Caracas, and on the road to adventure beyond my wildest dreams, the cool blue dome of the sky was unmarked by a cloud. The sun swung overhead and went swiftly down the western path as I trod the smooth stones that formed the road. The short twilight came and went, and a golden moon pushed above the timbered range that lay beyond Caracas. In the moonlight, I bent my steps toward the city, where I hoped to find the lady in white, the gracious lady who had come into my arms to find protection from the storm.

The city of Caracas, stronghold of Spain in Venezuela, and the key to its control, lies in a vast, fertile basin called the Vale of Aragon, the north rim of which forms a barrier between the city and the sea. As I came in sight of the city a morning sun, emerging from the mists of the east, touched the red-tiled roofs with gold. It was a city of beauty, a city of dreams; it held, for me, the present as well as the future. My mad worship would not permit me to consider the dangers that might beset me; I only saw the face of her whose life, I hoped, was to be bound up with mine forever.

I had reached a tiny roadside store on the outskirts of the city before I realized that no plan had been made, no thought of what I might do after I had entered this, the headquarters of the Spanish forces in Venezuela. I went into the store, traded five silver pieces for clothes and the privacy of a room where I might change, and came out again garbed in the coarse, brown, two-piece suit and the blue, turban-like cap affected by many of the French sailors of the islands.

The road I had taken led to the Plaza San Jacinto, where I turned south and asked my way to the home of Tomas Carrasco, which proved to be a red and brown, rock and adobe structure of considerable size.

Tomas was non-commital; his dark eyes surveyed me with grave concern, and after assuring himself of my "strangeness," he announced sorrowfully but with unmistakable firmness that he had no quarters that might be offered to travelers. Expressing my disappointment in halting Spanish, I offered my hand in parting salute. As he grasped it, vastly relieved, I folded my third finger into the palm.

He gasped, his swarthy face went ashen gray, and his sharp eyes searched my face. He turned my hand and studied it.

"There is a comfortable room for you, Senor, and food. A chiva, lately baked, frijoles, golden-brown tortillas, the sauce of papaya; fruit—luscious peaches from my own garden, oranges and melons from Coro, wine from Madeira, and rum from Cumana. . . . and a house of safety, Senor. If there is anything you might require—"

"You are very kind, Tomas," I said.

A dozen listless loiterers sat at tables or leaned against the bar as I entered and made my way toward Carrizal, who stood behind the bar.

He considered me with the calculating eye of a man who anticipates a sale. I gave the subject of my order careful thought. I did not dare to ask for American whisky, and wine was still considered a European drink. While I pondered thus a familiar voice came to me: "There is no rum in all the world, Senor, like rum from Cumana."

"I'll take some Cumana rum," I said to Carrizal, as another voice agreed with the connoisseur of rum. The connoisseur, whose back was turned to me, turned at the sound of my voice, turned swiftly, the mug of rum poised between the bar and his face.

He opened a wide mouth that still showed traces of the bruises from my fist and let out a great laugh that fairly rattled the windows. "Senor Loco," he cried, "the sea has given up its dead!"

I stared, aghast, for Manuel stood before me; Manuel, who twice had stopped my fist with parts of his face, and who could, therefore, have had no love for me. My thoughts were racing wildly. Manuel belonged to Bolivar, yet the Spanish Captain Alvarez, according to the Senorita Dulce, had called him a good sailor . . . and Dulce had said he was stupid. Name of G—d! And here was Manuel in Caracas, drinking and visiting boldly in a saloon less than a square from the plaza; free in the city, as unconcerned as though he were strolling along the levee in the safe city of New Orleans.

"Are you not mistaken, Senor?" I ventured. "Is there anything about me that should make you call me crazy?"

Now he went off into another convulsion of merriment. "Did the sea water dye thy whiskers," he roared, " and that yellow thatch of thine? Speak up, Senor Loco, and tell us how you came here—and why."

I had made an unpropitous entry into the stronghold of Spain. I had failed ere I had begun, and I had failed—by a grotesque twist of fate—because of the misplaced enmity of those who should have been my friends. Ah, well . . . I could, at least, show them the American indifference toward death.

"It is Manuel," I said, "no? Manuel, the sailor, who does not like the flavor of my fist." I smiled, extending my hand.

He, too, found my third finger folded into the palm. His mug of rum clattered to the floor, the grin disappeared from his face, and the evil light that had been in his eyes faded; he drew in a harsh, hissing breath and spat out a Spanish oath.

"Manuel," I cried, "has this fine Cumana rum touched your brain, or do you merely jest with a poor French sailor stranded at La Guaira, and seeking employment in Caracas?"

Manuel's left eyelid dropped, and raised quickly aagin, and his face was blank. "I think I should offer apology to you, Senor; I must have been in error, for you cannot be Senor Loco whom I saw fall from the deck of the Santa Lucrecia. No man could have lived in that raging sea. Yet I have seen you somewhere, or perhaps the rum has put a fancy in my head."

Clever rogue! He knew that the encircling loiterers, most of whom were doubtless Spanish sympathizers, must be appeased, so he had delivered the task of lying over to me. Now Pedro Carrizal broke in again: "Yest, Senor Frenchman, tell us where you saw our amiable Manuel, and tell us why he dislikes the flavor of your fist."

"Assuredly," said I, mixing mendacity and truth; "we had some words at La Guaira, and Manuel's knife, by chance, was slower than my fist; therefore my lungs are still intact, while his teeth, as you might see, are hardly company front."

The swarthy sailor offered a sour smile at this, and the crowd, laughing, went back to card games and drinks again.

Manuel turned to Carrizal and bestowed another wink. "I would speak with this fellow sailor privately, Pedro." Whereupon the bartender ushered us through a massive door and closed it after us; and Manuel, standing with his back against it, drew a gleaming knife from his belt.

"How come you here, Senor? I saw you fall into the sea."

"The sea was kind to me, Manuel, as well as the wind—and that knife you hold might still be slower than my fist."

"Your life is forfeit in Caracas, Senor Garde. When that dye has been removed the Colonel Fuentes will be pleased to see you, for he loves you not at all; neither will the cause of revolution suffer in your passing."

"And when I tell him of my masquerade as San Isidro in New Orleans, and what I saw and heard?"

Manuel swore, and then laughed. "Your interest, I think, is not with Zenezuela, nor with Spain."

"Never Spain, Manuel, for I have looked upon the dead city of Tucayan."

He replaced his knife in the scabbard at his belt. "I have heard of what Morales did to Tucayan; it is merely one of the many payments that we will have to make to purchase freedom. But freedom, at any price, is cheap."

My heart suddenly warmed to this earnest patriot. "I met an Irish soldier on the road," I said, "Captain Monahan, one of the British legion, who offered me his trust. He helped me change the complexion of my face and hair, and he referred me to Tomas Carrasco and the Cantina Merida."

"And the sign of the Sociedad Patriotico—?"

"He gave me that as well."

"Your life in this city, Senor, will not be worth a silver real when Fuentas finds you out. He has little cause to love one who, in the space of an hour, vanquishes him with the sword and steals the heart of his lady?"

"How can you know that, Manuel?" I cried hopefully.

"A mere matter of logic, a simple thing indeed. New Orleans was filled, one brilliant moonlight night, with the hue and cry of the chase, and the quarry was a tall, hatless, fair-haired man who had stabbed the noble Colonel Fuentes during the course of a duel in the Place d'Armes. We found, hiding in the apse reserved for San Isidro, such a man, who afterward refused to leave the San Lucrecia at the safe port of Coatzacoalos. Besides, the lady came to see him in his prison, and sought him out again in the fury of the storm. The lady journeys to Caracas and the Viking dyes his hair and beard and face and follows her, only to put his foolish head into a noose."

"Until the noose tightens, then, Manuel," I said, "my foolish head is safe. It is a long way from Spain to the cathedral, and I intend—"

The sailor gave himself over to boisterous laughter. "But the cathedral has been reached, Senor, the journey has ended, for the Senorita Dulce Lamartina will be married today at high noon—which is within the hour—to Colonel Adolfo de Fuentes, military aide of La Torre."

"Name of G—d!"

"The truth," said Manuel.

"The truth," said Manuel; "it catches you—no? He grinned. "How will your efficient fists take care of such a situation; will you push over the big cathedral, or —?"

"We can, at least, Manuel, go to the wedding."

"Madness, Senor! Surely you would not do so wild a thing!"

"Why not? Is not the wedding a public affair? I have taken care of myself for many years Manuel, and epect to do so many more. If you hesitate to accompany me, or fear that evil might befall—"

"Not at all," he cried, in high good humor now. "I wouldn't miss it for the finest ship in the Indies!"

As we entered the soft gloom of the cathedral my heart was beating a swift tattoo against my ribs, my breathing was the labored breath of the spent runner, and my body shook in the palsy of arrant fear. I had begun to cherish a faint hope that a portion of the Senorita's love had been bestowed upon me. She had come to my prison, had tried to save me; she had sought me out in the fury of the storm, and the light of her eyes when she had found me . . . h!

But who was Adolfo, what had he done to win her? Why should she marry this drunken Spaniard, whose loves were legion? When I had saved her, and brought her to those in the lifeboat, Adolfo had tried to kill me. A wild rage possessed me. De Fuentes would never marry her; I would throw myself upon him at the altar, I would put my fingers around his throat and hold them there until he died, and all the powers in the great cathedral would not stop me. I would tear . . .

A quieting hand was laid upon my arm and Manuel's warning whisper came to me: "Do you shake the roof from the building, fool? One is watched here . . ."

As we moved slowly down the spacious chamber was filled. An usher seated us less than twenty feet from the altar; we thanked him and, settled at last, listened to the suppressed murmur that went up from the waiting crowd.

"Yonder," said Manuel, pointing a prudent thumb, "is Morales, who acts for La Torre."

I studied the cold dignified man who bore with evident pride the gaudy trappings of his rank. Had I never seen the city of Tucayan I should have disliked this cynical Spaniard whose face was set in a mask of cruelty and whose eyes were veiled by heavy lids half closed as though to conceal his crafty thoughts.

This man, then, with the power of Spain at his call, had laid his hand upon a city, and had destroyed all the life it held. It hadn't been a gesture of war, I remembered, for not a man in Tucayan was armed. A deed of senseless brutality — no less—this destruction of a helpless town and the slaughter of its people. If Morales represented Spanish methods in Venezuela the cause of Bolivar, I reasoned, was just.

Hot anger burned within me, the racing blood pounded at my temples and, falling to trembling again, I gripped my fingers and ground my teeth in a fury of impotence. The glorious Lamartina was marrying the aide of this monster, and the colonel's emulation of the Butcher had earned for him already a reputation as infamous as that of his chief.

Now Manuel touched my arm "Careful, my friend," he whispered; "such malignant looks ill become a wedding. If you would conserve your life you must control your face."

I had come to realize at last that, behind the unfavored face of the swarthy and clever Manuel lay thoughts most beautiful and profound; and I wondered vaguely what manner of man might be this Bolivar, the father of the revolution; wherein lay his hold upon his people.

Francisco had said to me: "If Venezuela had a thousand men like like you, Senor, she would win her independence out of hand." Well, why not; could this game we call life offer to me any more fascinating sport? And if Bolivar were half the man that his amazing power over the people of Venezuela seemed to indicate, then service under him would be a glorious thing.

The swelling murmur of the throng was stilled with startling suddenness and a silver thread of music filled the air. It deepened into the slow harmony of a march and, in time with it, came a muffled sound of footfalls. I bowed my head, for I dared not look. They were coming down the aisle beside us.

After an interminable wait the priest's deep voice filled the cathedral with toneless sound. I heard nothing of what he said; I could not even raise my eyes. She was marrying him, marrying that craven Spaniard. Wherein had I failed; had I followed her for this—to sit idly while she gave herself in marriage to Adolfo, to wait in muted impotence while another man . . .?

I lifted my head at last and looked at them. They stood before the tall, serene, black-robed priest; Adolfo in the brilliant uniform of his rank, with his arm free now, and she in white, as fair, and as pale as a lily. Polito garbed as a lieutenant in the service of his majesty, Ferdinand VII stood beside her, his head swathed in a bandage and another around his throat.

My mad worship drew my eyes to her downcast face and held them there. I saw again the tender curve of her cheek, and the sweetly pointing chin, which trembled, else my eyes were playing me false; tiny black curls touched an ear and caressed her neck and her bosom rose and fell in an emotion beyond her control. The incongruous thought came to me that she seemed just like a little girl about to cry.

ON "TAMING GYPSIES"

A little more than three years ago announcement was made that 50,000 gypsies of Hungary were to be tamed. The government formally abolished all their privileges, ordered them to cease roaming about the country, to send their children to school, and to assume equal responsibility with their fellow citizens.

It was fairly easy to issue such an order and doubtless the document upon which it was engraved appeared impressive. The gypsies, however, continue to wander, try their best to keep their children away from school, and have no interest in the responsibilities of their fellow citizens. The government would admit defeat were it not for one or two "signs of progress." There is, for instance, a gypsy named Hermann Hihari, who has quit wandering after twenty years and is working to earn money to pay for his education. It is his plan to take any knowledge he gains back to the tribes and be a teacher to the Romany children.

Pointed to, also, is Michael II, "King of all the Gypsies in Poland" who has organized a community in which it is said one thousand gypsies are employed. He plans schools and recreation centers, even talkies and swimming pools, and speaks in the language of the promoter.

But, all in all, the Hungarian report says, the gypsies still go about telling fortunes, working sometimes for a few weeks in the summer, raiding henroosts, and living in carefree manner on the land which they say belongs as much to them as anyone else.—Oakland Tribune.

Buenos Aires is said to have the largest electric sign in the world. It is 188 feet by 30 feet, and contains 15,000 bulbs. It was made in the United States.

EAGLES TURN ON PETALUMA FIVE TO WIN

Redwood City Eagles evened an old score with the Petaluma Eagles Wednesday with a brilliant 22 to 18 basketball victory before a large crowd at Petaluma.

Led by John Weir, forward, who scored three field goals and a free throw, the Redwood City cagers opened strongly in the first half to lead, 15 to 7. The game got out of control of the referee in the second period and the Petalumans got the best of the free-for-all by chalking up 11 points to seven for Redwood City but the half-time lead stood up.

Weir Leads Attack

Weir opened the scoring with a field goal on a pass from Shine and repeated a moment later by intercepting a toss by Mitola, Petaluma guard. The Redwood City hoopsters moved up gradually to an 8 to 5 advantage, and then a shooting spree in which McLachlan, Shine and Lutje participated made it 15 to 7 at the half.

King, Petaluma center, and Mitola and Dittman, guards, found the ring for field goals in quick succession in the second half and brought the count up to 15 to 13. Capt. Gene Jordan of Redwood City scored a field goal and a free throw, and Lutje added a free throw to put the visitors out in front in spite of a general roughhouse. Toby McLachlan, corpulent Redwood City guard, was in the thick of the activity.

Play S. S. F. Saturday

The Redwood City team's showing in the return game places it as a favorite to win the Peninsula Basketball League championship from the South San Francisco Merchants at Redwood City Saturday night. The Eagles are also considering the possibility of entering the Pacific Association tournament later in the season.

R. C. Yacht Club Planning Cruise

Invitations have been extended to members of all yacht clubs on San Francisco bay by the Redwood City Yacht Club Ltd. to participate in the cruise to Candlestick Point February 27 and 28.

A. J. Hanscom, commodore of the Redwood City club; J. A. Hosta, port captain, and Perry Cumberson are members of a committee arranging the event, which in addition to a cruise on the bay will include a clambake at Candlestick Point, near the San Mateo county-San Francisco line.

Redwood City yachtsmen are finding time in odd hours to touch up their boats in preparation for the coming season, and each weekend finds some of the skippers overhauling gear and getting ready for the cruise.

Due to the recent rains, painting and refinishing have been postponed for a few weeks. The regular yachting season opens May 1, and it is during the month of April that most of the owners freshen up the paint and varnish work of their craft.

More than 20 yachts and smaller craft from Redwood City and a number of large cruisers from such clubs as the Palo Alto, St. Francis, Corinthian and Aeolian Yacht Clubs are expected to join in the February cruise from Redwood harbor.

136 Ducks Bring $500 And 30 Days

Claude Fox, the well known short story writer for this paper was in a quandry last Monday upon receiving a letter from his old hunting companion, George Genochio, who is in charge of a large wild duck preserve at Willows, Glenn county, saying he had just viewed a beautiful bunch of dead sprig ducks. Knowing that the open season for shooting ducks closed on December 15 and that his old friend was not engaged in the bootleg duck business, but done his shooting strictly within the law, Fox was at a loss to account for the fact that George's eyes had feasted on something that is slightly out of date down here. Yesterday's mail brought the answer in the shape of a clipping from the Willows Journal under date of February 6:

"The most important arrest of its kind in the Sacramento valley for several years was made late yesterday when game wardens captured Jake Herrin, 30, of Colusa, in possession of 136 ducks. A companion of Herrin escaped.

Herrin pleaded guilty to possession of the birds when arraigned this morning before Justice of the Peace Callender here and was fined $500 and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail. He was unable to pay the fine.

The birds were turned over to the Community Chest and to the county hospital.

Herrin and his companion had been hunting near the Willow Creek gun club. Officers had been keeping a close watch on him for a year, and after satisfying themselves that the men had illegally-killed birds in the car overtook the machine near Princeton. Herrin's companion, in the meantime, had escaped.

Revised P.A.L. Ball Schedule Is Drawn Up

A revised Peninsula Athletic League baseball schedule with seven prep baseball teams entered in the play was drawn up by P. A. L. coaches at a recent meeting. Unlimited team play starts with four games on March 11 and continues with four games each Friday for seven weeks. The last game will be played on April 29.

South San Francisco has withdrawn from varsity competition to enter lightweight play leaving Palo Alto, Sequoia, Burlingame, San Mateo, Jefferson, Half Moon Bay, and San Jose in the play.

With the addition of South City high, the 130-pound conference is expected to become a better organized league this year. It will consist of a six-week schedule playing mid-week games starting on March 30 and continuing to May 4.

The Palo Alto schedule follows:

Unlimited Schedule

March 11—Palo Alto at Half Moon Bay.
March 18—Palo Alto at Sequoia.
April 1—Palo Alto bye.
April 8—Palo Alto at Jefferson.
April 15—San Mateo at Palo Alto.
April 22—Palo Alto at Burlingame.
April 29—San Jose at Palo Alto.

130-Pound Schedule

March 30—Palo Alto at San Jose.
April 6—Sequoia at Palo Alto.
April 13—South City at Palo Alto.
April 20—San Jose at Palo Alto.
April 27—Palo Alto at Sequoia.

CASH GOES BEGGING

Records credit two Greeks with having written the first comedy play. This is said to have occurred about 560 B. C.

P. A., PANTHER PREP QUINTETS PLAY TODAY

Two tough games are on tap for the Palo Alto prep cagers in the Viking gym this evening when they meet the strong Panther teams from Burlingame high school.

Coach Lee Lancaster boasts of two fast teams, which should give the league leading Palo Alto teams a hard fight. The Panther fives undoubtedly would be in the thick of the battle for the championship had they not been forced to forfeit two league games in each division as a result of the recent "egg war" between San Mateo and Burlingame students. Those losses have counted against the Panthers.

The Burlingame mentor has two heavy-scoring forwards in Stein and De Mastri on his two squads. Between them, they counted 19 points against South City in conference games last, week, and they loom as the chief threats to the Palo Alto teams.

Hod Ray, Palo Alto mentor, has used a number of different starting combinations this season. For that reason it is difficult to name the five probable starters, although a team consisting of Erwin and Ethen, forwards; Cordes, center and Captain Misenhimer and Wood, guards, appears as the most likely choice.

Walter Back, who figured in Ray's surprise move in the San Jose, game, may make his second start at center against the Panthers. It is quite possible that a last minute change will be made and Back will start at the tip-off. During practice this week, "Blondy" has worked out at both center and forward.

Capt. Fred Woods and Glenn Jones are slated to hold down the guard posts when the Palo Alto 130-pound team takes to the floor. That combination holds Min Nakamura, with a questionable leg injury, in reserve. Paul Jew, as usual, starts at center. Jew has controlled the tip-off in every game this year, despite his diminutive size. Joe Mack, on his good showing against San Jose, earns one forward position with the other resting between Todhunter, Vetter and Sivertsen. Todhunter is figured on as being Coach Stewart's starting choice.

BASEBALL SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

Eleven games, including five practice engagements starting February 23 and six Peninsula Athletic League tilts beginning March 11, are on the 1932 Sequoia high school varsity baseball schedule announced Wednesday by Coach Leonard Gasanova.

Wet grounds, which gave the Sequoia diamond the appearance of a lake, are holding up the opening of practice to the extent that the Cherokees may not be able to go through with their two practice games this month, with Sacred Heart high school on February 23 and with the Santa Clara freshmen February 27, Coach Casanova said.

Other preliminary contests include the Stanford freshmen at Palo Alto March 1, Balboa high school at Sequoia March 2, and St. Ignatius high school at Sequoia March 5 as opponents.

Seven teams are entered in the P. A. L. varsity baseball race this year, Jefferson, Burlingame, San Mateo, Half Moon Bay, Sequoia, Palo Alto, and San Jose. The withdrawal of South San Francisco caused a rearrangement of the schedule, which is subject to the approval of the league board of managers.

More than 25 players signed up on the single day in which it has been possible to practice, but many additional veterans are expected to turn out the week of February 22 with the opening of the spring sports program after the close of the basketball season.

LeBlanc, a veteran pitcher who transferred to Sequoia last fall from Palo Alto, is expected to give other Cherokee twirlers, Leo LeRoy, Elbert Garcia and "Frenchy" Pommes, plenty of competition in the box this spring.

The complete Sequoia schedule follows:

Preliminary Games

Feb. 23—Sacred Heart at Sequoia.
Feb. 27—Santa Clara frosh at Sequoia.
March 1—Stanford frosh at Stanford.
March 2—Balboa at Sequoia.
March 5—St. Ignatius at Sequoia.
March 11—San Mateo at San Mateo.
March 18—Palo Alto at Sequoia.
April 1—San Jose at San Jose.
April 8—Burlingame at Sequoia.
April 15—Sequoia at Half Moon Bay.
April 22—Sequoia at Jefferson.

IS THE AKRON DEFECTIVE?

Although the navy has accepted the giant dirigible Akron after tests of a severe nature which seemed to indicate its perfect airworthiness, ugly charges have been made before the house naval committee going to show that this acceptance was, at least, premature, while some critics go so far as to say that the tests were by no means conclusive and should have been continued over a much longer period.

Two experienced workmen employed in the construction of the Akron, and also a supervisor who had held an important naval post, reported last March that defective material and faulty riveting had been employed in building the big airship. This report was turned over to the committee along with the statement that the men who made it had been dismissed from the employ of the construction company, when it had been discovered that they were the complainants. This statement has been denied by the company.

When experts were asked by the committee what would be the effect of faulty riveting in the 500 to 600 places in which it was said to have been used they unhesitatingly replied that "the ship would break up." Representative Britten, Republican, of Illinois, testified that twelve to fifteen other men working on the job had said there were defects. Part of the testimony went to show that the defects were so covered up that the navy investigators could not find them.

These charges are grave and should be carefully sifted. The American people would severely condemn the naval inspectors if their lack of care in this respect should lead to another Shenandoah disaster. However, there would seem to be little likelihood of such an occurrence, for in one of the tests the Akron was buffeted by high winds in a dangerous storm area and came back to her mooring ground laden with eight tons of ice, yet no harmful effects resulted. — Los Angeles Times.

SIX MILLION NAMES

Into the disarmament conference at Geneva move women bearing petitions, women who speak for the great peace hope which is held by the people of many lands. Not all of those who signed—and there were more than six million—are agreed as to the best ways to insure peace. Few have definite suggestions for the delegates.

Many of them, however, know from bitter experience the costs of war and all, doubtless, hold to a belief that a world cannot boast of civilization until it has erased the thought of armed conflict from the list of possibilities. If there is to dawn a day of assured peace on the world there must be men and women to believe in the cause and labor for it night and day. The voice of the people who bear the burdens must be heard as well as those of the delegated spokesmen and diplomats.

Those who carried the petitions into the disarmament meeting—for all the fact they may have been without practical suggestion in a time of emergency—had as much place there as anyone else. They represent those who shoulder rifles and those who send sons and husbands to battle. The six million signatures—of course but a comparatively small showing of the peace sentiment—speak of a desire and an influence which command a hearing. It is a sign of progress in the general movement that this is the first disarmament conference at which such an expression has been made.— Oakland Tribune.

All Hearts Bow To St. Valentine

LOVERS beware! A wealth of cheery little red heart's and rampant cupids are flaunting their charms from shop windows to lure even the wary into the endearing ways of St. Valentine.

And just what chance have young men and their sweethearts! There's no telling when one of these paper arrows may reach home or a plaintive verse, as sweet as a sugar plum, succeed in entwining itself around a loose tendril of a wistful heart.

It is safe to announce that there is many a girl who laughs at the loving tricks of her grandmother's day. That would be the kind of honor with a bunch of flowers, a bar pin or a dainty locket. But while girls shorten their dresses and cut their hair and while fashions in valentines come and go, the heart of the maid is generally as susceptible to valentines and their verses as that of the hoop-skirted lady generations ago.

"What are those things?" questions a mystified buyer, pointing to a row of lacy confections. "Would a girl really like one of them?"

Like them! She couldn't help it; they were the very essence of the old-time valentines. Through a paper lace gate was visible a graceful lady in billowy skirts and a pair of love birds, shaded in delicate lavender. Quite a contrast to the satirical and humorous concoctions which were popular a few years ago. But any older woman will say there is nothing new about them. They are imitations of the hand-wrought and fanciful expressions common years ago.

POP'S COLUMN

IT WAS getting mighty close to press time and this column wasn't written and I didn't have one single idea in all that vast expanse of skull. No message. No notion of any kind. The old tank is dry, sez I; I'll see Mr. Bud Simmers. So I saw Mr. Bud Simmers. Mr. Bud, sez I, what do you do when you have tried and tried to think, and you can't think? What do you do in a case like that, sez I? Mr. Bud, well, he said he didn't know, for shore. Said he never yet saw a time when he couldn't think of something. But if I was to find myself in sich a perdicament, he said; find that I couldn't think no more about nothin', why in that case, he said, I reckon I'd put on my Sunday suit and try to get myself elected a United States senator. Them fellers, he says, is the only men I know of that gits high paid for not thinkin' about nothin'—but jest talkin' about ever'thing.

* * *

It begins to look now as though the d'sarmament conference might be able to adiourn without any of the delegates declaring war on any of the others there present. If this can be done the conference will not have been in vain.

* * *

You may remember that we told you that there would most likely be a very unusually heavy rainfall this season, do you not? You do not? Well, now can it be that we forgot to tell you that. Dear, dear! I must be, as you so often say, getting senile. I meant to tell you.

* * *

I sat in a conference the other night with men from as far south as King City and Soledad, and as far north as San Mateo and Burlingame, and these men told about conditions in their communities, relating to finances, unemployment, etc. And there was there with us a man from away down in Southern California. And when each of us had told his tale about our own communities this man from away down south said: "Gentlemen, you don't know how well off you are! You people up here in the north do not know what tough times are! I'll tell you about tough times." And he told us. And I shall not repeat what he said, but this I will say: When I heard all that that man had to tell us about conditions down south, I wanted to stand up and wave my arms about and shout. Not, understand me, that I rejoiced in the bad luck of our southern friends, but that I exulted in our own so much better fortune in being able to live up here. After I heard that man talk the other night I hope I may get housemaid's knee right bad if I ever again say anything about tough times.

The New Tomb At Springfield

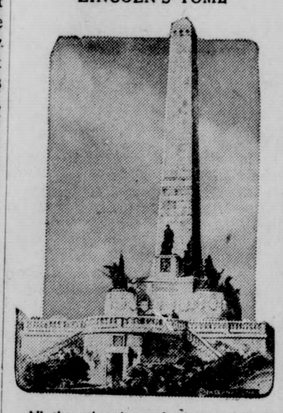
PRESIDENT HOOVER dedicated a transformed Abraham Lincoln tomb at Springfield, Ill., June 17, last year.

When the monument over the spot where the body of the Civil War president rests was given to the world again, pilgrims to the grave found that it is a place of simple grandeur befitting a national shrine.

For months it was closed to the public while skilled artists plied their arts to repair and rebuild it and gave it beauty, simplicity and dignity.

The reconstruction was made possible by the passage of a $175,000 appropriation by the general assembly in 1929.

LINCOLN'S TOMB



All the solemnity and decorum befitting the last resting place of America's beloved President has been exemplified in the re-designing program.

Much the Same Outside

Outwardly the monument appears the same, except that it has an air of newness, of freshness. In a terrace created at the south or entrance side of the monument there is a bronze head of Lincoln by Gutzon Borglum on a pedestal of granite.

The great transformation is in the interior of the monument. Under personal supervision of C. Herrick Hammond, state architect and former president of the American Institute of Architects, the previously unused and unfinished area at the base of the monument was opened and architectural skill and art combined to fabricate a rotunda connecting galleries and sarcophagus chamber.

One of the main features of the galleries joining the rotunda and the sarcophagus chamber are nine Lincoln statuettes of bronze depicting Lincoln at various stages of his career. These are the handiwork of internationally famous sculptors.

At each of the four corners of the central unit of the monument there is one of these statuettes, about three feet in height, resting on a pedestal in a niche. Diagonally across from each of these is a statuette in a similar niche.

These bronze statuettes were obtained by the state through the efforts of Mr. Hammond and H. H. Cleaveland, director of the state department of public works and buildings.

The sculptors, Daniel C. French, Fred Torrey and Leonard Crunelle, are each represented by two models while Lorado Taft, Adolph Weinman and the late Augustus St. Gaudens each have one.

As a background for these statuettes there are rich, warm-colored panels of marble

Supreme Effect in Chamber

Beautiful as are the rotunda and the galleries, the supreme effect is attained in the sarcophagus chamber. There the plasters and frieze are of french black marble, as dark as midnight, with walls of St. Genevieve golden vein marble. On the upper portion of each jet-black pilaster there is a bronze wreath.

The ceiling of the chamber is covered with gold leaf, and the room, like the rotunda, is lighted indirectly by lights hidden by an ornamental cornice.

There, over the spot where Lincoln's body lies beneath many feet of concrete, has been placed a new sarcophagus of solid marble of warm red hue. On it is the simple inscription:

"Abraham Lincoln,
1809—1865."

Directly above what formerly was the north door, but now transformed into a window covered with a wrought iron grill, there is cut in the marble this famous tribute to the emancipator:

"Now He Belongs to the Ages."

Across from the sarcophagus in a crypt sealed with slabs of marble rest the bodies of Mrs. Lincoln and three of their sons, Edward Baker, William Wallace and Thomas.

Flags Form Honor Guard

Arranged along the semi-circular wall of the sarcophagus chamber, flanking the sarcophagus, there is an array of nine flags.

In the place of honor, at the right of the sarcophagus, stands the Stars and Stripes. The official standard of the seven states in which the Lincoln family lived from the time of their arrival in America until the end of the emancipator's career — Massachusetts, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois—occupy the next seven positions.

President Hoover personally installed the flag of the President of the United States.

A PROPHECY

(From "Lincoln's Grave.")

Old soldiers true, ah, them all men can trust,
Who fought, with conscience clear, on either side;
Who bearded death and thought their cause was just;
Their stainless honor cannot be denied;
Ring it and sing it up and down the land,
And let no voice dare answer it with sneers,
Or shut its meaning out;
Ring it and sing it, we go hand in hand,
Old infantry, old cavalry, old cannoneers.

And if Virginia's vales shall ring again
To battle-yell of Moseby or Mahone,
If Wilder's wild brigade or Morgan's men
Once more wheel into line; or all alone
A Sheridan shall ride, a Cleburne fall—
There will not be two flags above them flying,
But both in one, welded in that pure flame
Upflaring in us all,
When kindred unto kindred, loudly crying,
Rally and cheer in freedom's holy name!

—Maurice Thompson

NO SALE

UTICA, N. Y.—Several homes were visited by silk stocking salesmen recently. That, in itself, isn't anything unusual, but the salesmen were making the odd request of housewives that they smell each of three pairs of stockings and then tell which they preferred. It was found that Colgate University students, in trying out salesmanship, were testing the theory that an article perfumed will sell faster than one that isn't. One of the pairs of stockings was perfumed.

Woodside

William Byrnne has renewed his faith in the efficiency of the peace officers of the state. Early in December, Bill lost two valuable saddles that slipped out of his barn one dark night and failed to return. He reported the theft to the police and for a time hoped that he might recover possession but that hope had vanished completely when early this week he received word from Los Angeles that his saddles had been found in a second-hand store in that city. So Bill will ride once more.

Mrs. P. D. Jarvis was called to Los Angeles last Friday by the death of her father who had been struck down by an automobile while crossing a street.

Peter Duzanica has been elected manager of the baseball team of the Woodside Fire Department for the coming season. Peter's first job will be to find a dry field for the boys to practice on.

The Parent-Teacher Association has invited the pupils of the school to a Valentine party to be held in the school auditorium on Friday afternoon and on the evening of the same day, the pupils are offering an entertainment to which all are invited. This is in honor of the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln and will offer songs and recitations and a short play dealing with four chapters in the life of Washington's birth, the second will show Washington as a school boy, the third shows him at Valley Forge, and the last will be his inauguration as president of the United States.

Notwithstanding the cold weather of the past few weeks, the almond trees are bursting into bloom and this is better evidence than any woodchuck or groundhog can give that spring is on the way.

Woodside is not a community of rapid changes, nevertheless, over a period of time important changes do occur. This correspondent, the other day, came across an address book in which he had listed the residents of Woodside just 25 years ago. A check of the list shows that just three-fourths of those who were our neighbors at that time are with us no more. Some of them have passed away and some have moved, but the fact remains that a new Woodside has come into existence within that period.

The proposed tour of San Francisco's Chinatown by the pupils of the local school planned for last Saturday had to be postponed because of rain.

Robert P. Hayes, for many years a resident here, died at the home of his daughter in San Francisco last week.

The primary grades of the Portola school are presenting a circus performance at the school on Friday afternoon with elephants, clowns, pink lemonade and everything. The public is invited.

MULE CROSSES SUIT

STOCKTON.—A mule on the Stanislaus river bridge at 3 o'clock in the morning is the cause of a $25,000 damage suit filed here. It is alleged by the plaintiffs, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Pacheco, that as Mrs. Pacheco drove the family automobile across the bridge the mule loomed out of the darkness directly in the path of the oncoming car. In the collision, the car was catapulted off the bridge and into the river. The mule belongs to a dairy company.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.
